CJL Friends raise £250k

An influential military adviser to successive Israeli prime ministers took to the stage last week as 250 guests piled into the Montcalm Hotel in central London. During a night on which £250,000 was pledged to the Centre for Jewish Life (CJL), an organisation that supports thousands of young Jewish professionals, Dr Dan Schueftan, a senior academic and director of the National Security Studies Center at the University of Haifa, shared insights into the current challenges facing Israel today. "The event was special as we welcomed friends into the CJL family," said chairman Rabbi Yosef Vogel, as he thanked guests for helping the Bond Street-based organisation celebrate its six year anniversary. The money will be used to grow a programme that includes community development, leadership enrichment and educational endeavours.
